PROGRAM

In honor of national Social Workers Month, the staff and faculty at Compassionate Care Hospice and Temple University Harrisburg School of Social Administration invite you to join us for a workshop and luncheon.

We are pleased to present this workshop intended to help professionals and paraprofessionals understand the importance of exploring spirituality; especially, for those people with critical illnesses and who are dying. Discussion around the role of the non-clergy helper in assisting this population and their families with the decisions which have a spiritual component will be addressed. Participants will explore ethical parameters of the non-clergy helper discussing spirituality.

In a world where the term spirituality is so misunderstood and in many ways ignored, it is vitally important for social workers and other helping professionals to have the knowledge and skills to effectively deal with this often sensitive issue.

OBJECTIVES

Upon completion of this workshop participants will be able to:

- Define terms: faith, spirituality, religion, transpersonal, mindfulness, and ethics
- Develop an increased understanding of the holistic nature of adding spirituality in the treatment process cognitive, behavioral, physiological, cultural and spiritual.
- Comprehend the internal spiritual process often occurring in individuals and their families experiencing death and life decisions and dying itself.
- Learn transpersonal tools to help the social worker alleviate a patient's terminal illness, death anxiety, fear and angst.
- Avoid traps often associated with workers who address a spiritual component to their treatment.
- Knowing where the social worker ends and a member of the clergy should be brought in.
