

The Caribbean Philosophical Association

Announces

A CALL FOR PAPERS FOR ITS FOURTH MEETING:

JUNE 27–30, 2007

UNIVERSITY OF THE WEST INDIES-MONA, KINGSTON, JAMAICA

Theme: Shifting the Geography of Reason IV: Intellectual Movement

Under this heading, the Caribbean Philosophical Association will expand on its organizing theme, when it focused on the broad impact of the rise of Africana and other “third world” philosophies from geographical notions, metaphors, and assumptions that have long been associated with modern concepts of philosophical reason. For 2007, we will look more closely at the variety of intellectual movements that have shaped the development of ideas, especially in the Caribbean, that have contributed to, and continue to have an impact (positive or negative) on, the geography of reason. These movements include, but are not limited to, Pan-Africanism, Garveyism, Negritude, Rastafari, Black Consciousness, Feminism, Historicism, Poeticism, Marxism, Afrocentrism/Africology, Creolité, Mestisaje, Phenomenology, Hermeneutics, Existentialism, Pragmatism, Logical Analysis, Deconstruction, Poststructuralism, Cultural Studies, Psychoanalysis, and more. In the spirit of reshaping the geography of reason, we invite the submission of papers on the philosophical aspects of these movements, nearly all of which are present in the texts and practices of Native Caribbean, Afro-Caribbean, Indo-Caribbean, Euro-Caribbean, African, Latin-American, African-American, Indian, and European thinkers, or papers that offer radically new formulations of issues born from these movements. Proposals may be submitted and papers may be presented in English, Spanish, French, or Portuguese since members of this organization are encouraged to work in these languages with and in indigenous and creolized New World languages as well.

In keeping with this focus, we encourage papers and panels on topics such as:

Africana Philosophy
