End-of-Life Decision Making: The Right to Die?

The Temple Political & Civil Rights Law Review invites you to the symposium on Saturday, October 22, 2005, at the Temple University James E. Beasley School of Law.

This symposium will feature keynote speaker Professor Sylvia Law from New York University School of Law, as well as panels of accomplished scholars addressing the legal, medical, and ethical issues involved with end-of-life decision making.

Symposium panels will address the Oregon assisted suicide law, the Terry Schiavo case and the Constitutional concerns it raised, the role of palliative care in America, and the ethical responsibilities of lawyers and doctors when they represent and care for the sick and dying. Our panelists include legal practitioners, law professors, and doctors.

We are offering five Continuing Legal Education credits, plus one Ethics credit, for attending the symposium.

Confirmed Speakers Include:
