Immigration Reform and Policy in the Current Politically Polarized Climate

A symposium sponsored by
The Temple Political & Civil Rights Law Review With Keynote Address by Doris Meissner, Senior Fellow at the Migration Policy Institute
Saturday
October 14, 2006
The Temple Political & Civil Rights Law Review invites you to the symposium on Saturday, October 14, 2006, at the Temple University James E. Beasley School of Law.

This symposium will feature keynote speaker Doris Meissner, Senior Fellow at the Migration Policy Institute, as well as panels of accomplished scholars and practitioners addressing the legal, political, ethical and practical issues involved in the immigration debate.

Symposium panels will address the current immigration debate in Washington, the economic impact of immigration policy, an advanced look at citizenship including the practical implications, and the humanitarian issues that surround this debate with a focus on U.S. border policies.

We are offering six Continuing Legal Education credits, including two Ethics credits, for attending the symposium.

Featured Speakers Include:

KEYNOTE SPEAKER: DORIS MEISSNER

Doris Meissner is the Senior Fellow at the Migration Policy Institute and former Commissioner of the United States Immigration and Naturalization Service

Confirmed panelists include:

David Abraham, Professor of Law, University of Miami
Judy Bernstein-Baker, Executive Director of HIAS and Council Migration Service of Philadelphia
Howard Chang, The Earle Hepburn Professor of Law at University of Pennsylvania
Bryan Lonegan, Attorney, New York Legal Aid Society Immigration Law Unit
Dennis Mulligan, Director of Legal Services, Nationalities Service Center
Rebecca Peters, Manager of Government Relations for the American Counsel on International Personnel
Audrey Singer, Immigration Fellow, Metropolitan Policy Program at The Brookings Institute

These panelists will be joined by other experts in the field.