Chairman’s Report – Howard Gittis

As we approach the beginning of a New Year, Temple can look back on this year with pride and forward to 2005 with a great deal of excitement and enthusiasm.

This year we had more than 17,000 applications for the freshman class; and we admitted a class of 3,900 with the strongest academic credentials in the University’s history.

We recruited 57 new tenured and tenure-track faculty from fine institutions across the nation, including Princeton, Brown, Berkeley, UCLA, the University of Chicago, the University of Wisconsin at Madison, the University of Washington, the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, and similar institutions. This year we are seeking to recruit more than 100 additional faculty.

We opened a new Community Entertainment and Education Center on Cecil B. Moore to house WRTI, the Partnership School Program, and community service programs. Construction has begun on the revitalization of the townhouses at 1800 Liacouras Walk for student advising offices, the Student Health Services Department, and several other programs. Construction has also begun on the New Student Center. Both of these projects will be complete next fall.

We have made very good progress on the new Fox Business School and the Tyler School of Art. With the cooperation of the state government, architects have been selected for both projects. By the end of 2005 plans for both should be completed, and construction should begin at the end of 2005 or early in 2006.

Ground has been broken on the new Learning Center at Ambler, and we hope for completion in January 2006.

This Board of Trustees has made a strong commitment to revitalizing Temple’s libraries. We have made the first commitment of additional funds to help make that happen. And the administration has recently announced the appointment of Larry Alford, deputy director of the University of North Carolina Libraries, as vice provost of libraries to coordinate and oversee the work of all of our libraries. I believe Mr. Alford is here today, and I ask him to stand to be recognized and be welcomed by all of us at Temple.
In the years ahead, we look forward to strengthening Temple’s collections, improving service to users, and expanding our presently cramped library facilities.

We have taken a step toward preservation and re-use of a Temple landmark, the Baptist Temple. Roof and wall repairs have been completed, and a task force is now looking at the best uses that can be made of this important historical building.

New academic policies for students have reduced the number of incompletes and have strengthened standards for acceptable academic performance. With the cooperation of hundreds of teachers, we are now able to provide early academic assistance to many freshmen and sophomores who encounter difficulty with one of their college classes.

At our last meeting, the President reported that the Faculty Senate had not been able to approve a new program of general education. The Provost and President have since worked closely with the leadership of the Faculty Senate; and in today’s Academic Affairs Committee report is a recommendation for approval of a new general education program that combines proposals made by the Faculty Senate and those advanced by the administration. In fall 2007, entering students will participate in a new, challenging general education curriculum that will emphasize analytical and writing skills and that will include comprehensive courses in social science, great literature from all ages and traditions, science and technology, and human behavior. Temple’s general education program will become one of the most progressive in the country.

We continue to seek to strengthen our athletic programs. New playing fields are available this year at Ambler for our softball, baseball, and soccer teams. A new support and locker room facility will follow. We hope soon to address other issues relating to our intercollegiate athletic program, including football.

As some of us entered the building today, we were greeted by some faculty who are urging a conclusion to negotiations for a new collective bargaining contract. We share their commitment to conclude negotiations in a way satisfactory to the faculty and good for Temple. Just as Temple has moved into a position of national leadership in student admissions, curriculum, faculty recruiting, and facilities, there is very broad support among the Trustees for the adoption of faculty personnel policies that set standards of performance and review that fully meet or exceed the standards used by the best universities in the nation. We hope that these aspirations will be shared by the leadership of the faculty union, so that negotiations can move rapidly toward a conclusion that is good for Temple students and for the University’s future as well as for the faculty.

This Board can conclude its work in 2004 with a sense of confidence that we have met our responsibility to provide stewardship for Temple University. The President has built a strong leadership team at Temple, and we look forward to continuing to work with him and his team to complete the major work that we have underway to build a strong and secure Temple University in the years ahead.
PRESIDENT'S REPORT – David Adamany

On behalf of the students, faculty, staff and administration, President Adamany thanked the Board members for their wise guidance and leadership this past year. In addition, President Adamany thanked the Faculty Senate leadership for working closely with administration to achieve the General Education Curriculum that has been endorsed by the faculty and administration. Faculty Senate President Daniel O'Hara was commended for providing remarkable leadership in helping to create a proposal acceptable to the faculty and administration.

President Adamany welcomed Larry P. Alford, the newly-appointed Vice Provost for Libraries and University Librarian. Larry will oversee all of Temple’s 17 libraries, and will assume the position on February 15, 2005.

President Adamany announced the retirement of Tom Anderson, Associate Vice President for Community Relations. Tom has built remarkable relations with the surrounding community. He was instrumental in the development of many community-based programs including the science fair, nursing clinic in the community, and the tutoring program. Tom will stay on as a consultant to oversee the science fair.

In closing, President Adamany extended best wishes for the season and for the year ahead.
