PRESIDENT'S REPORT – ANN WEAVER HART

President Hart introduced Anthony E. Wagner, Senior Vice President, Treasurer and Chief Financial Officer, who summarized the financial crises on Wall Street and the potential impact for Temple University.

Mr. Wagner reported that State revenues were approximately $300 million behind estimate, and that on annualized basis; the shortfall could be over $1 billion. The Governor has introduced budget cuts to minimize the shortfalls. Temple has been instructed to reserve $7.5 million of our approximately $190 million appropriation. There may be further cuts in the future.

Mr. Wagner noted that since the University budget is two-thirds salary and benefits, the university will manage these cuts by primarily restricting salary and benefit cost through a hiring freeze and restricting out-of-state travel. He also commented that this year’s budget cuts may be the basis for next year’s appropriation.

These budget cuts have accelerated a 40-year trend of waning State appropriations and increasing reliance on tuition. In 1972, Temple’s budget was 34% tuition and 60% State appropriation. Today, Temple’s budget is 68% tuition and 25% State appropriation. With the $7.5 million budget cut this year, Temple has lost $35 million of the actual buying power of our State since 2002.

However, Mr. Wagner stated, Temple will continue its commitment to affordability for our students.

A more detailed report will be presented at a future meeting.

President Hart returned to the podium.

- GenEd website

The Philadelphia Experience
Introduction
- I am excited about the start of my third academic year at Temple University.
- Taking this opportunity to provide an update on a project that was just taking shape when I arrived.
- Gen ED is being implemented this year and with such success, it is remarkable.
- It is a tribute to all those who have so hard.

General Education – Recap
- Finally, rolling out for incoming freshman after years of careful planning and piloting of courses
- This Fall, Temple is offering:
  - Around 100 new courses (60 courses have been piloted)
  - More than 700 sections and 20,000 seats offered.
- Replaces the core curriculum which was last updated in the 1990s.
- Board of Trustees last passed a major revision in the policy in June 2007, allowing for greater flexibility in implementation without altering overall goals of the program.

General Education Goals
- In addition to helping students develop basic skills and knowledge, other main goals of the general education program, as approved by the Board, are:
  - To introduce students to the intellectual paradigms and ways of discovering and affirming knowledge in the broad fields of contemporary life—specifically in the natural sciences, the social sciences, the humanities, and the arts;
  - To create common learning experiences among students that will allow them to share ideas and intellectual experiences outside the classroom, improving the intellectual quality of student life; and
  - To equip students with basic knowledge and skills they will need make informed judgments about important current issues, and to become engaged citizens in a globalized world.

Areas
- Combination of foundational and breadth courses
- Requires 11 courses in each of 9 areas:
  - Analytical Reading and Writing;
  - Arts;
  - Human Behavior;
  - Race and Diversity;
  - Qualitative Literacy;
  - U.S. Society;
  - World Society;
  - Science and Technology – Two Courses;
  - Mosaic Humanities – Two Courses
- Mosaic Humanities is a discussion-based seminar courses that explores primary texts in great world cultural and intellectual traditions

Four Thematic Areas
- Globalization
- Sustainability
- Community-based learning
- Philadelphia Experience
Philadelphia Experience takes students into the city to put classroom lessons to work through field experience and interaction with community members.

Philosophy of the Program:
- Under the parameters set forth by the Board, the General Education program is led by a director and an executive committee. Together they have developed this statement about the philosophy of the program and its goals.
  - On the GenEd website, they have posted this philosophy: “In a world where no one can hope to know it all, the best way to prepare for the future is to learn how information is linked and inter-related. GenEd is about making connections – connections between academic knowledge and current controversies, connections across different areas of study, and connections between the classroom and the dynamic city of Philadelphia.”
- Content is important, but GenEd courses focus on cultivating certain habits of mind—habits of reading, thinking, communicating, problem-solving and creating.
- Goal is to make students into lifelong learners and engaged citizens.
- In GenEd, it is more than just about content; it is about how we teach, too.
- Assessment of the effectiveness of each course and the program as a whole is a key component.

Samples of the Philadelphia Experience
- In these courses, students can blend real encounters in the city and its metropolitan region with their progress through the different GenEd areas.
  - An art course will take them to museums, dance performances and historic buildings.
  - An education course will place them in local schools and community centers.
  - An environmental science course will include visits to green roofs and community gardens.
- The theme remains constant -- real experience, integrated in some way with academic study, helping students develop “an understanding of an appreciation for Temple’s urban and regional setting.”

Here are just seven examples of the over 60 courses that will take students out into the Philadelphia area for real-world, hands-on learning experiences:
- “Sacred Space” will take students to the Basilica of Sts. Peter and Paul, Laurel Hill Cemetery and the Japanese Tea House in Fairmount Park.
- “Criminal Behavior” will examine the motivations of criminals by assessing potential high-crime locations in Center city and North Philadelphia.
- “Higher Education in America” will explore diversity in higher education by taking students to local campuses.
- “Sustainable Design” will visit local energy-efficient skyscrapers and green roof projects.
- “World Musics and Cultures” will require students to attend world music performances in Philadelphia.
- “Religion in Philadelphia” students will canvas part of the city to create a map of the religious landscape.
- “Education in a Global City” will bring students to schools, community centers and cultural organizations in neighborhoods surrounding Temple.

Discussion

Board of Trustees Meeting
October 14, 2008
Media Coverage

- We are proud of the work that we are doing here at Temple.
- It is gratifying to see that others also recognize what an innovative program we are offering.
- GenEd as a whole and Philadelphia Experience in particular have been gaining a great deal of media attention.
  - Philadelphia Inquirer
  - National Public Radio/WHYY
  - Inside Higher Ed (an online new outlet targeted at higher education professionals)
- Time Magazine and The Chronicle of Higher Education have expressed interest in covering the program as well.

WHYY Interview

- An audio clip of Dr. Terry Halbert, Director of General Education, being interviewed by Elizabeth Fiedler of WHYY was played.

Conclusion

- Congratulations to GenEd Director Terry Halbert and everyone who has worked so hard on this.
- Members of the General Education team present today are: Terry Halbert, Julie Philips, and Annabelle Jenninek.
- This same group will be making a presentation to the Academic Affairs Committee at its next meeting in early December.
- The presentation will include a ‘mini-lecture’ from Dr. Jonathan Nyquist of the Earth and Environmental Science Department.
- Also, a student will talk about his experience in General Education.
- You are invited to attend.

At the end of the report, the President opened the floor for discussion.

Mr. Barrack commented that he is pleased with the media exposure that the program has been getting and asked about student feedback. President Hart indicated that the student response has been very positive. For example, the student who will be presenting at Academic Affairs Committee will talk about his experience taking the science course: "Disaster: Geology vs. Hollywood." The student plans to talk about his initial fear of science and explain how taking this course has changed that fear.

As asked about negative feedback from the media, President Hart commented that there was negative feedback from George Leef of the Pope Center for Higher Education Policy. Dr. Halbert responded his criticisms.
